Ian got on one knee, opening the jewel case and offering the diamond ring to Will.

"Would you be my... Jesus, 'husband' sounds awkward. Would you be mine?"

"I'm already yours, you own me" Will said wryly.

"Dammit, Will! I didn't mean it in the working-together sense. You knew what I meant. Wait, what do you mean, 'own you'?"

"You know, I'm always here when you need me."

"I always need you. Even when I do my solo thing, it's just so I could come back to you. Oh, sod it, my knee, is hurting, I think I should get up. You know how it goes, 'When my knees hurt, I like to stand'..."

"Quoting your own lyric, Ian? Now, that's beyond cheesy," Will smirked.
